DANCER DENIES CHARGES HURLED BY PANTAGES

GIRL AGAIN CALLED TO STAND

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23—(U.P.)—Eunice Pringle returned to the witness stand inthe trial of Alexander Pantages today for rebuttal testimony and with school-girl simplicity denied all the showman's accusations that it was she who was the aggressor in his secluded little conference room.

The 17-year old dancer uttered soft spoken denials as District Attorney Fitts asked her if she had made certain compromising moves as Pantages testified when he told his version of what occurred on he afternoon Miss Pringle claims he attacked her.

Denies Charges

"Miss Pringle, did you grab Mr. Pantages by the necktie." Fitts asked.

"No sir." the girl answered.

"Did you slam the door of the little room shut?"

"No sir, Mr. Pantages did."

"Did he push you out of the little room?"

"No sir."

"When you went in that room did he ask you 'What do you want,' and did you reply 'You know what I want-'"

"No sir," came the emphatic denial.

NATURAL GAS IN RICHMOND

That natural gas will become available for general consumption in northern Contra Costa county communities was indicated yesterday when the Standard Oil company announced that starting today natural gas will be piped from the Kettleman hills oil fields to the Richmond refinery for use here.

K. R. Kingsbury, president of the Standard Oil company stated that after a period of experimentation, the gas would be turned into the mains of the Coast Counties Gas and Electric company for general distribution, probably within a few days.

The gas is being brought to the local refinery through an oil pipe line from Coalinga. The line has been thoroughly cleaned and will be used for the delivery of natural gas.

The fuel will be used here in the boilers and stills at the refinery. This will permit utilization of gas that is now wasted and will conserve fuel oil for refining.

Wilson Reports On Light Jubilee

Excellent cooperation in Richmond in publicity and program covering the light jubilee, was reported by Aubrey Wilson, chairman of the light jubilee committee at the session of the board of directors of the Richmond chamber of commerce yesterday.

RECRUITING OF FOOTBALL PLAYERS BY COLLEGES HIT

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(U.P.)—A bombshell which was three and one-half years in the making was exploded today beneath more than 100 American colleges and universities declared guilty of recruiting and subsidizing athletes in a report issued by the Carnegie Foundation for the advancement of teaching.

For more than three and one-half years, Dr. Howard J. Savage, staff member of the Foundation, and three associates visited personally 130 American and Canadian universities, colleges and schools. "Bulletin No. 23" is the result, and "Bulletin No. 23" certainly reveals proselyting and tells about it in no uncertain terms.

Most of what is told about a "nationwide" commerce in athletes is generally known, of course, but the report is of special interest because it unhesitatingly calls by name the institutions involved in what Dr. Savage and his associates term "the darkest blot upon American college sport."

Press Hit

The paid football coach, the gate receipt, the costly sweaters, pullman cars, recruiting, commercializing publicity the press comes in for a few of the criticisms all these things should be done away with if athletics are to be brought into a sincere relationship with the intellectual life of the college, Dr. Henry S. Prichett declares in a preface to the bulletin.

"Only 26 of more than one hundred universities and colleges studied were without trace of recruiting, and only 29 without subsidizing," the bulletin asserts.

"Of the thousands of individual cases of recruiting and subsidizing studied, alumni were responsible in only 30 percent, college administration officers in eight percent, and athletic officers in 50 percent.

Methods Told

"In many instances the nationwide commerce is carried on through the cooperation of several groups or representatives."

Responsibility, in the final analysis is put up to the college president.

The Foundation's report describes recruiting in its various forms. It tells how they do it at Wisconsin and how they do it at Lehigh.

"About 1919," the bulletin says "there began to spread through the east and south and along the Pacific coast a contagion of ready assistance to promising athletes which was initiated and coordinated mainly by older hands.

Face Problem

"The result is that today, notwithstanding many statements to the contrary, the colleges and universities of the United States are confronted with acute problems of recruiting and subsidizing, especially with respect to

Defies Doctors

ALBERT B. FALL, former secretary of the interior, is shown on his way to appear in court on a bribery charge. Fall refused to listen to advise of his doctors who contended he was too ill to leave his bed.

FALL TRIAL NEAR CLOSE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—(U.P.)—The seventh and perhaps the last of the criminal oil trials, that of former Interior Secretary Albert B. Fall, on a charge of accepting a bribe from E. L. Doheny, will go to the jury Thursday.

The trials have resulted so far in four acquittals one conviction, and one mistrial.

Justice William Hitz will charge the jury in district supreme court, soon after court opens, to stick to the evidence and disregard any sympathy they may have for the 68 year old defendant who has been ill

No Blame Fixed In Auto Death

An inquest into the death of Joseph Lucido of Antioch was held last night in Antioch by Coroner Aubrey Wilson. The jury returned a verdict that "Joseph Lucido came to his death in an automobile collision by trying to get out of an automobile driven by Jesus Colorado." Blame for the accident has not been fixed.

11 JURORS SELECTED FOR TRIAL OF RALPH FLEAGLE

LAMAR, COLO., Oct. 23—(U.P.)—A jury to try Ralph Fleagle, the "grey wolf" of the pack of bandits that staged the $210,000 holdup of the First National Bank here a year and a half ago is expected to be selected early Thursday. Eleven men had been chosen when court recessed tonight.

As in the case of the two companions, of Fleagle, Herbert Royston and George J. Abshier, who were convicted and sentenced to the gallows last week, most of the jurors are farmers.

The defense has been struggling through three days to get a jury that will disagree on the death sentence for the confessed robber and slayer, but the state appears to be well satisfied with the aspect of the jury box as it is constituted at this time.

Again today widows of the two men slain following the holdup, a bank teller and who was kidnapped and a Dighten, Kans. doctor who had administered to the wound sat in the courtroom throughout the day. They are Mrs. E. A. Keffinger, the widow of the bank employe, and Mrs. W. W. Wineinger, whose physician husband was shot in the back after he had served his purpose.

FETE PLANNED TO WELCOME RADIO KFWM

Plans for a luncheon or dinner to welcome the coming of radio station KFWM, and announcements for a ground breaking ceremony for the Filice and Perrelli cannery were both discussed at the meeting of the directors of the chamber of commerce.

M. A. Hays, member of the publicity committee was named chairman of a special committee to make contact with C. R. Welch, president of the Oakland Educational society operators of the station, to plan the event by which KFWM will be welcomed to Richmond. The plan contemplates a broadcast of the program at that time to get the story of Richmond on the air at the same time that the station's opening program is being broadcast to the listeners of the west.

Filice and Perrilli, who will shortly begin construction of their cannery on the inner harbor, announced through Fred D. Parr that they will have plans and specifications ready by Dec. 1, and that contractors should be at work shortly thereafter. The ground breaking ceremony will be held when work actually commences. Preference is to be given to local labor at this cannery, which will employ from 700 to 900 persons; 70 percent of them being women it was announced. The plant will cost at least $150,000 and the machinery approximately $118,000 it was said. It will be ready for operation in time to handle the cherry crop early in 1930.

George N. Rooker, chairman of the industrial committee, has been named a member of the industrial committee of the Central coast council of the California Development association, which will shortly hold a meeting in Los Angeles.

SECRET BANK ACCOUNT FOUND

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23—(U.P.)—On the eve of a "faith meeting" of Four Square Gospel pastors, Aimee Semple McPherson today was subpoenaed to appear before the county grand jury Thursday to explain her management of church funds.

Deputy District Attorney Daniel Beecher, ordered that all documents relating to an extinct bank account alleged to have been maintained by the woman evangelist under the name of Ruth and Elizabeth Johnson be produced. Investigator Walter Hunter indicated that $16,000 or $17,000 in checks frequently had been drawn against the $100,000 under deposit in 1927.

"Why, there's nothing mysterious about the account," Mrs. McPherson said at Lake Elsinore today. "The account was opened with the knowledge of Temple directors and a report of the account appears in the minutes. It even was reported in the Temple income statement."

The investigation of the Four Square Fund was started by Beecher after the request of Rev. John Goben, whom Mrs. McPherson dismissed from his post as assistant pastor at her Temple.

Beecher also also subpoenaed Rev. Goben, Harriet Johnson, secretary to Mrs. McPherson, Miss Letha Mae Brooks, former financial secretary to the evangelist, and T. T. Mawhinney, bank manager.

The "faith meeting" of pastors south of Oakland was believed to have been called because four branch temples have seceded under Rev. Goben's leadership.

Inquest Held In McDonald Shooting

Death due to gunshot wounds by hands of unknown highwaymen, was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Arthur McDonald, Pinole constable, yesterday afternoon in Rodeo. The inquest was conducted by Aubrey Wilson, the county coroner.

McDonald was killed during a gun battle with bandits who robbed the Rodeo branch of the Bank of Pinole, several weeks ago.

Details of the holdup, and the subsequent killing were told by Arthur G. Dern, manager of the bank.

According to Dern, McDonald came into the bank while the holdup was in progress, and was lined up against the wall next to him.

The subsequent gun battle was described by J. Kronick, Rodeo merchant, who came into the bank to cash some checks. Kronick told how McDonald edged into a closet and commenced firing at the bandits who returned the fire and escaped.

J. Cordoza, another Rodeo merchant, was standing in the doorway of his store, according to his story, and witnessed the delivery of the money by the armored car just before the bandits arrived. Gordoza stated that as the first highwayman came out into the street he stopped next to the bandit car, and fired two shots into the bank. His confederate joined him immediately and the escape was made.

All witnesses agreed that the car which was used for the robbery was an open touring car.

Varied descripcions of the bandits were made by witnesses, one witness stating that the man carrying the money sack was "fair, young, and handsome," and another declaring that he was between 40 and 45 years old, wore glasses and weighed approximately 160 pounds.

The inquest was held in a hall directly above the bank where the shooting took place.

GREENLAND MAY BE GOAL OF FLIER

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK, Oct. 23—(U.P.)—A ray of hope glimmered tonight for Urban F. Diteman, trans-Atlantic aviator, who was listed as missing on a flight from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to London.

The optimism arose because of belief the Montana flyer may have chosen the Greenland route. The trade department received orders from an American firm two months ago to send three drums containing 600 liters (158 gallons) of gasoline to Julienhaab to be held at Diteman's disposal.

The order was duly executed. Since then, however, nothing has been heard concerning Diteman's plans.

CHARTER BODY HITS CANNERY

Continuing their attack on the management of the Richmond city wharves, speakers at the session of the Charter League last night labeled the fish cannery to locate on the outer harbor as an "undesirable" industry and contended that Richmond had received more financial benefits from previous administrators of the outer wharf.

Considerable comment was made over the fact that the cannery was to locate here and it was even suggested by one member, that a petition be started to stop operations.

Lee Windrem, principal speaker of the night scored the present management of the wharves, and charged undesirability of the fish cannery, which will be located on the outer harbor.

A letter was read by Lowery, received from the Veteran's of Foreign Wars, inviting the league to cooperate in the Armistice Day celebration. Lowery indicated that several automobiles, driven by members of the league would be entered bearing the signs, "Richmond Charter League."

WOWAL

I love you! And, whatever may betide,
Still I shall love you! All that broken years,
Dejected hopes and ineffectual pride,
Ephemeral dreams and comprehensive fears
May bring will serve to make me care the more
To hear your least wish as a glad command
For my obedience—to give the store
Of my small self to your forbearing hand.

I love you! And, though it may be the grief
Things past my power that you dearly need
And must turn to, yet I shall always wait
And live for you, rejoicing in the creed
Of the past hours, quietly content
In what may be, not questioning the will
Of destiny or its harsh instrument—
What may befall—since that you love me still!

Calling Two Bluffs, Or, A Fair Exchange

At come at last, after all the arguments, and high time, too—
That revised and improved version of the marriage service in the prayer book—
Revised to conform to common sense and common usage,
Improved by a closer approximation to common justice.

According to the new prayer book, just published and revised for the first time since 1892,
The bride will no longer promise to "obey."
And the groom will no longer promise that "with all my worldly goods I thee endow."
Both omissions constitute a move in the direction of realism and veracity.
For years, of course, many American brides have omitted on their own hook
The bridal vow of obedience.
Of, if they did repeat it, they did so with their fingers crossed.
No real man would insult his wife by expecting her to "obey" him,
And, if the occasional hangover cave man does think of such a thing,
He promptly "has another think coming to him," these days!
Since wifely obedience long ago reached the status of a joke, and a joke in poor taste,
It was high time to take it out of the marriage service—
To call a bluff.
Meanwhile, men ought not to kick,
For a fair exchange is no robbery,
And, in exchange for the excised vow of wifely obedience,
Men no longer need vow at the altar to come across with everything they possess,
That promise, too, has always been more honored in the breach than in the observance.
We've been told that there was a time when a wife really did obey her husband,
But we doubt that he EVER took seriously and literally the promise
To endow her with all his worldly goods.
Until comparatively recent years, she often was wheedling for new hats and small change
Before they'd been married a year.
And when he did give her as much as $5,
The "endowment" was usually prefaced by a query
About what she'd done with the last $5.
Not that we think a man ought to endow his wife with all his worldly goods—
The provision seems to us as unreasonable and unjust as the other clause about the wife's obedience.
I agree with the modern church that the only place in the marriage service for both bluffs is OUT—
And good riddance to bad rubbish!

A WOMAN IN MOURNING

She wore widow's weeds
And spoke with a sniffle.
She erected a stone to her husband's memory
And insisted on planting a weeping willow
On the east corner of his grave.

One day, as she was crossing the cemetery,
The wind began to blow.
And the grave digger noticed
She wore bright red garters.

The winged airmen bend their bows
And pull the sinewy strings;

DOGS IN FATHER DUFFY'S HEAVEN

Many New York women, whatever their religion, have the friendliest faith in Father Duffy, and it will not be lessened by his answer to the heckler who asked him if dogs go to heaven. "I don't know," he said. "I hope so. Above all the animals, I think dogs deserve heaven most."

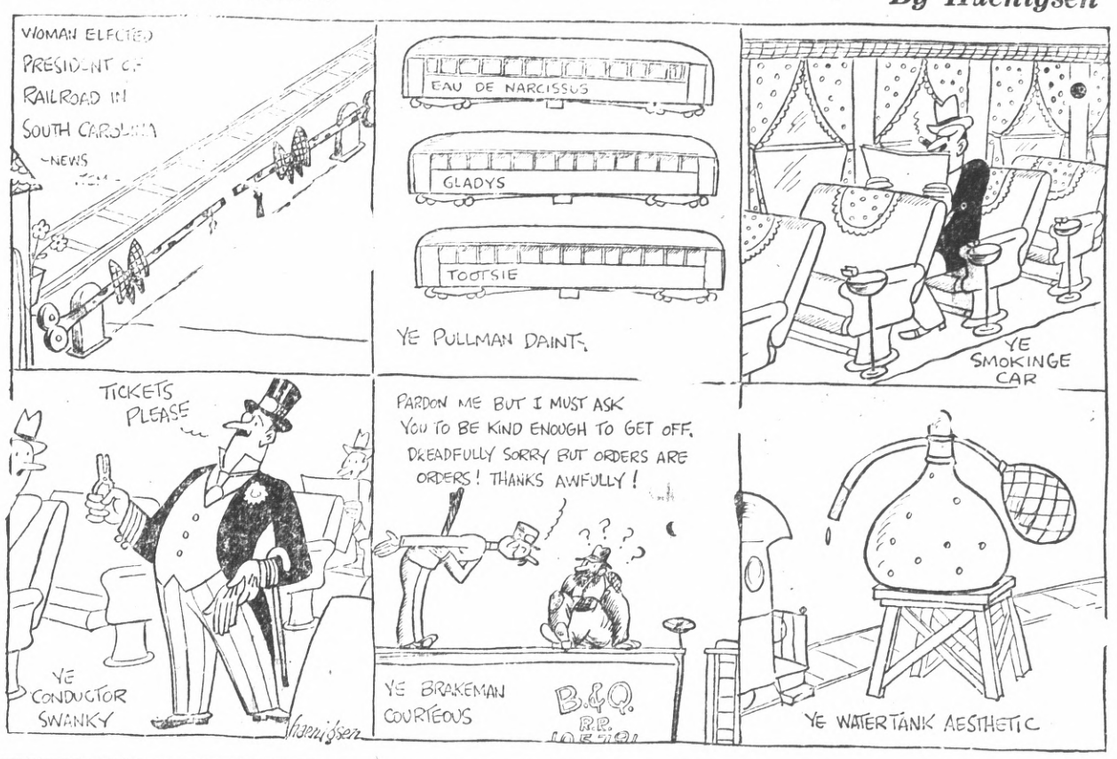

That tenderly human theology reminds us of what B. H. M. wrote when her small black Dixie was killed before her eyes by an automobile. For ten years Dixie had watched her master down the street every morning, and waited for him on the hall rug every evening. When her mistress was ill, Dixie was on guard for weeks beside bed or couch, and was the joyous companion of the convalescent's walks.

"And I hope," B. H. M. said in her letter, "that St. Peter lets Dixie meet me, and, if her paws are muddy from a recent rain on the golden streets, she may jump all over my celestial garments and I'll feel my welcome in heaven begun. Dixie's name stands way up near the top of those I hope to see, when faith gives way to sight."

MODERN OBJECTS AND A MODERN FRAME CARRY FORWARD THE NEW NOTE IN THIS ROOM WHERE IMPORTANT FURNISHINGS BELONG TO AN EARLIER DAY

Over-Mantel Decorations and Pictures in Modern Rooms

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1929

BY THE very simplicity of its basic scheme the modern room announces that it has set the stage for interesting decoration against its neutral background.

And this time when we speak of the modern room we refer, of course, to the later modern treatments as distinguished from those more bizarre and vivid expressions that were typical of the introductory stage of the movement.

To-day, for every exotic highly colored modern scheme there are perhaps a half dozen of the opposite type—rooms full of soft harmony achieved by the blending of many shades of one color rather than by the mixture of contrasting hues.

In these subdued schemes the wall treatment, floor covering, upholstering and draperies are often worked out in tones such as cream, beige, straw and brown or plum shades. By contrast of light with darker colors these combinations become interesting in a way—but not until contrasting color notes are added by accessories and pictures do these large neutral areas become truly enjoyable.

Somewhere a strong note of blue-green, a flash of orange or coral or rusty red, perhaps in the coloring of one glorious picture, will command the eye. Echoes of these colors will be found in a bowl of flowers, a coral tree, a pot of cactus, jade book ends—and that epicurean spirit within us—as sensitive to color harmonies as it is to well-blended seasoning in the preparation of food—will find itself completely satisfied.

Aside from the question of color, there is another element that we seek in decoration. At this particular time, when faced with the need to blend old furnishings with the new, we like to find a subtle relationship between the modernistic and that which is not so new. And very often modern pictures, mantel decorations, other objects of art, help to establish this kinship for us in such a nonchalant manner that we wonder vaguely where the one school begins and the other ends.

An adjustment of this nature is presented in a very charming way by the room illustrated. Is it modernist? Refreshing, rather, with its charming classic mantelpiece, its nest of tables, the deep upholstered chair from an earlier day and other old-time features.

To this catholic combination is added the modernist platinum frame on the picture above the fireplace: a pair of modernly sleek birds below: against the wall a delightful cabinet of macassar wood: a rug in geometric design—and behold, a room with a distinctly modern feeling, yet comfortable with the presence of familiar things.

The room is indeed a vindication of many of our foremost decorators, who stoutly maintain that there may be a successful combination of one's time-honored pieces of furniture and ornaments with carefully selected modern furnishings.

The same principle is illustrated in the framing of the picture. It is a colorful harbor scene, not radical in its treatment, while the frame, severely plain in design and carving, gives a quite modernistic suggestion. And this is further emphasized by the stark, flowing lines of the bronze bird figures and all else that is modern in the room.

In this over-mantel decoration, by the way, we have an example of perfect picture hanging, for a panel forms a most effective background for a picture of the same proportions. It may be hung well within the outlining moulding, and it is most important to use parallel cords instead of a single cord or wire which hangs in a peak from the moulding.

And while we are on the subject of panels and pictures we should know that just now it is very modern to treat the over-mantel space to a classical picture appliqued to the wall, with the moulding of the panel used as the outline or frame of the picture. This is being done by both architects and decorators who adjust the size and shape of the over-mantel panel to the size and space of the chosen picture.

Another treatment that is intriguing uses in a large over-mantel space a collection of pictures of related subjects similarly framed. This, of course, must be done with discretion, else the effect will be patched and lacking in unity.

A mirror hung in the paneled space above the mantel also becomes a charming decorative feature in the modern room. But with it goes a bit of warning. If the mantel is high, then the mirror fails in one of its most important missions—that of reflecting interesting bits of the room—for a mirror hung high on the wall can reflect only the blank ceiling.

Just as an amusing digression—and to further illustrate the importance of mantel decorations and pictures in the modern scheme—let us return to the photograph. Notice how the bird-figures, the little china animal on the table, the jeweled tree on the cabinet and the pattern in the rug all seem to have a cousinly feeling toward each other. They even find an echo in the detail of the picture above—and so tie the entire room together and give it a pleasant, restful atmosphere.

If you have the slightest doubt of the importance of the picture and accessories in this scheme, cover them for a moment. Imagine the room without their splash of color, their interesting outlines, the shadow patterns they cast upon the wall. And there's your answer.

Sandwiches for the Lunch Box

VARY the sandwiches you put into the lunch box of the school child. The hard-boiled egg sandwich will be more relished if it is sometimes chopped with sweet green pepper and a little mayonnaise added. Another time chop the egg with celery and a lettuce leaf and mix with mayonnaise.

A honey sandwich can be varied by sprinkling it with grated carrot. Banana, honey and sweet cream is a good combination. Chopped dates and prunes mixed with orange juice make a good sandwich filling.

Other good fillings are: Banana pulp and preserved raspberries; orange marmalade and finely chopped almonds; sardines mixed with grated egg yolk and a bit of melted butter and seasoned with salt, pepper and lemon juice.

Boston brown bread or graham bread spread with a paste of minced sardines and cream cheese is a tasty sandwich, and the young folks will like raisin bread with cream cheese and jelly filling. Marshmallow paste and chopped pecans make a delicious spread for either white or dark buttered bread slices.

When the Shoe Pinches

WHEN shoes pinch it is possible to ease the pressure and wear them in comfort. Put the shoes on, then dip a piece of flannel into boiling water, wring it out and lay it on the shoe where it presses until it cools. Repeat this until the shoe feels comfortable. Do not remove the shoe until it is perfectly dry.

If new shoes give a burning sensation along the soles plunge the foot with the shoe on into water to cover the soles.

Shoes that slip at the heel are apt to cause a blister but rub paraffin or soap on the stocking and the shoes will not slip.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

By Robert Barry

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1929

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Senators and national political committees find no trouble at all getting themselves into a lather of excitement about a tariff bill.

They exhibit an astounding indifference to such things as radio reception in millions of American homes and the light and gas bills of every American household.

The impression is inescapable that Congress lags in its legislative appreciation of what the aviation, radio and "power trust" issues really mean to the American people.

All three have been dealt with by Congress most casually. Congress cannot be accused of having paid no attention to them. They have been discussed frequently. Congress cannot deny the charge of bogging down with them, of fateful compromising over essentials of log-rollings and trimming and half-baked concoctions of malicious demagogues.

Radio broadcasting has gone along somehow in spite of a static of political indecision. It has been put on a year to year basis which would invite even more unsatisfactory conditions than those which now obtain. Commercial broadcasting of the type millions of Americans receive every day has become possible in spite of and not as a result of Federal legislation or co-operation.

The Senate balked away from meeting the "power trust" issue when Senator Walsh, of Montana, brought it to the fore.

Aviation, because it is new, has its problems and precious little sympathy on Capitol Hill.

Controversy over the Eighteenth Amendment, for National Prohibition, and in lesser degree the Seventeenth for the direct election of Senators, is held to militate against any other amendment which might be proposed.

The proposed Twentieth Amendment, to give Congress power to legislate against child labor, appears to have failed definitely of ratification by the States.

The Norris amendment to change the dates for the assembling of Congress and the inauguration of Presidents has been approved by the Senate but rejected by the House.

A resolution to an amendment to have uniform marriage and divorce laws never has escaped from a committee pigeonhole. Other proposals are so languishing.

Greater public scrutiny of suggested changes in the organic act of the Republic and a growing tendency against too much centralization of authority in the Federal Government is held to militate against any new amendment to the Constitution.

In the circumstances it is interesting to learn that attorneys for some of the leading aviation companies are in something of a funk over contentions that a constitutional amendment may become necessary to clear up existing troubles arising from "air law."

The desire is to apply the principles of Admiralty law, which is provided for in the Constitution. Aviation cannot be embraced within its scope without modification of the organic act. The commerce clauses in the Constitution are held inadequate to enable Congress to assume full charge of air traffic or to prescribe a uniform code of laws for aviation cases, especially in giving the Federal courts exclusive jurisdiction as in maritime cases.

As matters stand to-day the aviation companies are being subjected to all manner of freak enactments by State Legislatures. The situation is in essence a repetition of conditions which existed prior to the enactment of the Interstate Commerce Commission Act applicable to the railroads. A City Council could prescribe by ordinance that fast transcontinental trains should slow down to eight miles an hour passing through the village; that the engineers should wear pink uniforms and green neckties, or that headlights should be turned off or blue baby ribbon be tied around the smokestacks.

The Supreme Court sustained the contention of Congress that it had the exclusive and complete right of statutory regulation of all railroads engaged in interstate commerce. The Esch-Cummins Transportation Act of 1921 went even further in its "invasion" of the regulatory province of State commissions over intrastate rates and practices.

Counsel for the aviation companies generally are agreed that the commerce clause is not broad enough to give Congress any greater authority over airplanes than that now being exercised through the Department of Commerce supervision of planes, pilots' licenses, plane inspection and so forth as interstate common carriers.

The growth of aviation in the United States has brought a natural, if sometimes illogical, expansion of tricky legal questions, in addition to a deluge of law suits arising from accidents. The bulk of those civil actions are going into State courts. Even though there has been every compliance with the rules of the aeronautical section of the Department of Commerce, the aviation company would be subject to jurisdiction of the courts and the regulatory enactments of local Legislatures or municipal councils.

Should subsequent consideration disclose agreement that a constitutional amendment was essential to the application of admiralty law for aviation Washington has not the slightest hesitancy in saying that commercial aviation is in for a lot of grief.

Opposition to additional changes in the Constitution cannot be disputed.

If Congress could be persuaded to propose such an amendment, the selfishness of local communities probably would preclude its ratification.

An interesting phase of the discussion revolves around Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States. She is employed now as counsel by one of the commercial aviation companies.

A story is being circulated to the effect that her employment was for the specific purpose of "putting over" the suggested Constitutional amendment.

I do not find confirmation for that rumor, nor for the suggestion that Mrs. Willebrandt impressed her new employers as an evangelist or propagandist and not as the able lawyer she proved herself in the Department of Justice and in the Supreme Court of the United States

A DISH A DAY

BY NANCY DORRIS

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1929

Boston Cream or Washington Pie—just a simple cake put together with a delicious cream filling—was baked here yesterday. Space did not permit the printing of the filling, however, and to-day's recipe is for a particularly good orange cream to be spread between the layers of the pie.

NANCY DORRIS

The orange filling has a variety of uses. It may be filled into tart shells and topped with candied fruit and nuts, or a sizzling hot pastry shell and, after cooling, covered with a meringue for orange cream pie. As the filling for ice-box cake it is unsurpassed. Topped with a spoon of cream and shreds of candied orange peel, it masquarades as a simple sweet de luxe.

Simple indeed is the recipe for

ORANGE CREAM FILLING

One-half cup sugar
Three tablespoons flour
One-fourth teaspoon grated orange rind
One-fourth cup orange juice
One tablespoon lemon juice
Yolks of two eggs
One tablespoon butter
Cooking time, five to ten minutes.

A more generous amount of filling may be had by doubling the recipe. Care in measuring the ingredients is essential to a successful doubled recipe, however.

The double boiler is the proper utensil to cook the filling. The water in the lower half should be boiling gently when cooking begins.

In the upper half place the sugar, flour and grated orange rind. Mix and add the orange and lemon juices. Stir and then beat in the egg yolks. Adjust the two parts of the double boiler and cook gently until the mixture is thick. This will take from five to ten minutes, or until the mixture is spreadable. Add the butter and stir until melted.

Take from the fire, cool, and then the filling is ready for use.

Cut the home-baked or bakery simple cake or sponge in halves crosswise with a sharp knife, like a shortcake. Place the lower half upon a doily covered large plate or platter. Spread the orange cream over this nicely. Lay the top half of the cake over the cream neatly. Dust the top with powdered sugar and Boston cream pie will soon be ready to serve.

Seventy Years Young!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE scorns that ancient prejudice which harshly dictated that age was a limiting factor of usefulness. To-day, old age not only commands respect but demands its place in every walk of life.

"toasting did it"

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

LOVELY GIRL TURNS CROOK, REFORMS

Spines will tremble tonight at the Fox-California theater tonight when "The Hole in the Wall," a Paramount melodrama of crooks and spooky spiritualism opened for a one day showing.

Claudette Colbert, as the beautiful, small-town girl who plunges into the mazes of metropolitan gangster plotting and intrigue, and Edward G. Robinson, as "The Fox," genius of the game, have the principal roles in the play.

The story deals with the forces of the crazy crooks and their wealthy victims upon whom they prey through the use of fake spiritualism, gain the confidence of the well-to-do folk and later armed with personal information black-mailing or robbing them.

Miss Colbert, dark-haired and slender, supplies a plentiful amount of sex-interest as the unctuous "Madame Mysterio," a spiritualistic medium. She is also seen and heard—for it is an all-talking production in a number of appealing love scenes with David Newell who plays Gordon Grant, a keen witted newspaper reporter, who finally aids the police to strip the crooks of their deceptions.

One of the weirdest features of this mystery-thriller is the blood-curdling "banshee" wail of Barry Macollum which he utters from time to time to help the other crooks to "put over" their evil trickery.

Marcia Kagno, an adorable seven-year-old of four, has an appealing role in the film as the kidnaped grandchild of a wealthy widow. Other support is brilliantly given by Louise Closser Hale, Katherine Emmet, Donald Meek, Alan Brooks, Nelly Savage, George McQuarrie and Helen Crane.

If you like action, thrills, love scenes and spinal tremors you should see "The Hole in the Wall" at the California theater today.

'Old Ironsides' Historic Film Seen At High

The historic movie, "Old Ironsides," was presented to the pupils of the Richmond Union high school yesterday in the high school auditorium.

Part of the picture was accompanied by music played by Archie McVicker, local pianist. The plot of the picture was centered on the part played by the battleship Constitution in the war with the Barbary pirates. The weekly Standard Oil music broadcast will be heard by the high school pupils today in the school auditorium.

Pool Expert Lauds Local Natatorium

The Richmond Municipal Natatorium is one of the best on the coast. This was the statement made yesterday by Carl Wener, swimming promotion expert of Portland who inspected the local pool yesterday with Fire Chief William P. Cooper.

Werner said it was his business to promote swimming and swimming pools on the coast.

He declared that the method of operating the local pool is unexcelled anywhere. The pool is clean, the water is filtered in the most modern manner, and is purer than ordinary drinking water, he said.

He lauded the constuction of the pool and also the arrangement of the dressing rooms and the manner in which they are kept.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping." Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless. And it works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

Henry Ford in the Pictorial Review

I believe in personal liberty, but in my long observation I have never seen beverage alcohol do anything but destroy personal liberty. Not only does it destroy the personal liberty of the drinker but it seriously curtails the personal liberty of his relatives, shopmates, and fellow citizens.

Already the change in attitude toward drink is beginning to have the influence and in wealthy circles the habit of drinking is disappearing fast. Two years ago drinks were served everywhere—all sorts and kinds of drinks. But conditions are now fifty or sixty percent better. Foreign embassies in the United States, acutely sensitive to the proprieties of the situation, have, in some cases, accepted prohibition as the rule in the embassies; are, in other cases, considering doing so; have, in all cases, ceased public use of their liquor stocks. This is a very significent indication as to which way the social wind is blowing.

The tabu is increasing. It is no longer considered smart to drink. The vulgarity of it is beginning to show through the smartness. Hostesses who no longer desire their homes to be known as places where the laws are violated have done a great deal to make it unfashionable to serve drinks at society functions. Their example will be followed by those lesswell-poised women who get their smart ideas from the clever magazines.

Women who have not sense enough of their own to realize that they are co-operating with the criminal class in their effort to be smart, or to realize they are ruining their own health and that of their family, and aging themselves prematurely — such women will stop serving liquor when it is considered a stupid thing socially. And that time is in sight.

There will be no hurrah about it, no publicity, no moral appeal or anything of that sort, the social drink, so called—rather, the drink of a heedless but influential part of society—will simply disappear with the other things that are not done. Many sensible and womanly women in what is called Society with a capital S are growing restive over their positions as substitutes for the abolished saloon. Besides, they understand now that the drinking is not "social" but the coldest commercial proposition in the country today. Foreign capital is dependent for its profits on the popularity of liquor in the American drawing-room.

For it should be understood that it is not THE PEOPLE of this country who are breaking the law. By and large this country is dry, both in principle and in practice. The enormous wet propaganda in our newspapers and theaters does not express what our people are thinking, but what certain interests desire them to think. Our people, usually unsuspecting are beginning to wonder at the continual dripping of liquor in public propaganda. They are tired of it.

The bootlegger is only a minor pawn in a gigantic under-cover operation whose intention is to bring liquor back to this country, wheather we want it or not. To force it upon us, to destroy the well-being and wealth and happiness that have come to the majority in this country, since we have gone without liquor—that is the intention. No American woman will be a party to a conspiracy like that once her eyes are opened.

For myself, if booze ever comes back to the United States I am through with manufacturing. I would not be bothered with the problem of handling over two hundred thousand men and trying to pay them wages which the saloons would take away from them. I wouldn't be interested in putting automobiles into the hands of a generation soggy with drink.

The moderate drinker is a man who gets moderately drunk.

Moderation covers a multitude of drinks.

The two-drink drunk is the man whose auto has an accident.

Why should the wets have all the pep in their publications?

Every drunkard I ever knew called himself a moderate drinker. He only takes a drink when he wants it.

It's a sad state of affairs when a bootlegger cannot make a dishonest living without being annoyed by a lot of dry raiders.

Let's all quit drinking.

—Hamilton Northrop in Exchange

More Mothers each year—treat COLDS EXTERNALLY

When Vicks VapoRub was introduced, mothers especially were quick to appreciate it, because it is just rubbed on and cannot upset children's delicate stomachs, as "dosing" is so apt to do. Of course it is equally good for adults.

Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing," and the demand for Vicks has grown until it is necessary to again raise the figures in the famous slogan. There are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

NATURAL GAS ARRIVES IN RICHMOND

The fact that the natural gas would be brought here immediately was learned yesterday at a gas hearing before the State railroad commission in San Francisco.

Rate Cut Promised

At that time Clyde L. Seavey, railroad commissioner presiding at the hearing to fix rates for natural gas services proposed for the bay regions by the Pacific Gas and Electric company interrupted proceedings to announce that any rates the commission may fix for natural gas will entail a substantial reduction from those now in effect for artificial gas.

Seavey's announcement was hailed with enthusiasm by the city attorneys of the bay cities who were at the hearing to fight for retention of present gas rates for the natural fuel.

Seavey's announcement came after Claude Brown, State fuel commissioner had spent two hours on the stand outlining a tariff schedule, which, he said, would save bay district gas users $2,870,000 per year.

Brown's recommendations, it was pointed out, are almost identical with the demands made by representatives of the bay cities at a series of conferences with the administrator during the past week.

Minimum Charge

He urged that the company be directed to sell the natural gas at the same price per volume as now charged for artificial fuel. The only change is the schedule recommended involved the amount of gas allowed for the minimum charge.

The minimum charge is now 80 cents for less than eight-ninths of 100 cubic feet. Brown recommended that with natural gas in the supply mains, 80 cents be charged for less than eight-ninths of 400 cubic feet.

Brown declared that although the volume of gas allowed would be more than cut in half, virtually the same heating value would be given for the money as the natural gas has a higher heating unit than artificial gas.

He declared that the average family uses $3.60 worth of artificial gas a month. Under his recommendation they would receive the same amount of heat for $2.19, he declared.

DANCER DENIES CHARGES OF PANTAGES

tained Pantages' story of what happened—the one that the jury must match against the girl's accusation that the multi-millionaire lured her to the little room to discuss booking her act for his circuit and then consummated an attack.

The theater man testified Tuesday that the girl persistently hung about his office after he had told her that he did not want her act, that it was unfit for his circuit and that finally she approached him in the hallway and was granted a private interview. They no sooner had entered the room and seated themselves than she tore at his clothes and screamed, making it necessary for him to force her from the room.

Miss Pringle denied also that she was accompanied by Nicholas Dunaev, author of her act, or any other person when she entered the Pantages theater building last Aug. 9, the day of the alleged attack.

Threat Refuted

"Did you at any time say to anyone, 'If he doesn't book me he'll be sorry as long as he lives,' and did any one reply 'Don't get cold feet.'" Fitts asked.

"No sir," Miss Pringle answered, refuting the testimony of Garland Biffle, defense witness who has been indicted for perjury.

The young dancer denied that Dunaev had been to her house more than 12 times. Leo Zlacket, grocer, testified for the defense that he had seen Dunaev there 50 or 75 times, the defense attempting to show close association and possible conspiracy to frame Pantages.

Visit Denied

Two women employes of the Pantages theater testified for the defense that they saw Miss Pringle in the theater about 5:45 p. m. two nights before the alleged assault, but the girl declared today that she was at home that night having dinner with her mother, father and Dunaev.

Dunaev was on the stand for a time, being called in first rebuttal on Biffle's testimony of the alleged conversation between him and Miss Pringle, which the defense introduced as indicative of a frameup.

"I was in the office of Theodore Gottsdanker, my attorney," having left Miss Pringle out of my car at the theater," Dunaev said in explaining his whereabouts at the time Biffle said he saw him in the theater lobby. R. S. Madrid, Gottsdanker's assistant, was called and substantiated the testimony.

Pantages Unshaken

Pantages finished his testimony just after court opened today and when he stepped from the stand ihs testimony had not been shaken on any material point. The defense closed its case with his testimony.

The multi-millionaire showman's last few minutes of cross examination were devoted to emphatic denials that he had told police officers a story different from that he related on the stand.

When he returned to his chair at counsel table the jury had his accusation that Miss Pringle had obtained an interview, torn his clothing and screamed as part of a plot to compromise him for money or theatrical booking.

Demonstration Denied

"When you were taken to the police station didn't you tell two officers that Miss Pringle had disheveled your clothes, that you tripped and fell to the floor and as you slipped you grabbed her by the leg?" District Attorney Buron Fitts asked.

"I did not," the 54-year old defendant replied.

"As a matter of fact, didn't you even put on an exhibition there to show the manner in which you had reached the floor?"

"Absolutely not," came the denial.

Pantages admitted talking to the two officers, Lieut. Robert Griffin and Patrolman George W. Canzler, and attempted to explain what was said, but was forced to merely deny or affirm the text of Fitts' questions.

The excessive heat of the last few days and mental exhaustion caused Harvey Connett, juror, to be dismissed from the jury this afternoon. He was replaced by Mrs. William Ingels, first alternate. The trial proceeded immediately although there was a 45 minute delay while he received medical attention during the morning and made a brief effort to continue.

Richmond Is Getting New Industries

Richmond is cashing in on the past three years of intensive effort.

The new industries are coming to Richmond. Announcement of two new industries within the past two weeks confirms the faith of those who have believed in Richmond.

Both new industries are canneries. One, by the firm of Filice and Perrelli, will be on the inner harbor, the other by Joseph Crivello, will be on the outer harbor.

The former will have an investment of more than $200,000 and will employ from 700 to 900 persons seven to nine months of each year. The latter will have a plant with 40,000 feet of floor space and will employ at least 250 persons, and will have an investment of $125,000.

Filice and Perrelli are one of the largest independent packers of fruits and vegetables, while Crivello specializes in the canning of sardines.

Both these new industries are signed, sealed and delivered, and will be operating in Richmond by April first of next year.

Here is concrete evidence that Richmond CAN get new industries and that Richmond WILL get new industries.

The Chamber of Commerce is proud to have had a part in these important developments.

SPORTS

BEAR SECONDS WILL MEET OLYMPICS

BERKELEY, Oct. 23.— In Philade'phia they were called Nibs Pirce's Jumbo Reserves. In Berkeley, Saturday they will probably be known as debutants —not of the society bud variety however if and when they face the strong Olympic club team in the California Memorial stadium.

The reference is, of course, to the strong second edition of the Golden Bear football varsity that travelled 3000 miles to watch the University of Pennsylvania ... Saturday.

East Impressive

Phliade'phians were mightly impressed with the size and proportions of the Golden Bears who outweighed the Quakers about 15 pounds to the man. They bet that whenever a first string man dropped out of the line-up a bigger Bear came up from the reserves to take his place. However that may be, the second stringers tentatively slated to oppose the Olympic men at some ...sive.

Price is silent as to his plans for the game since it presents a knotty problem for any coach to unravel. Indications thus far however are that the first string eleven that downed the Quakers will see action, probably at the start of the game. Then, if all goes well, they may be replaced by a new varsity recruited from the men who made the trip but who did not see service in the east.

Return Next Year

The situation offers John Gridfan a good opportunity to see what sort of team Coach Price will have in 1930 for what few exceptions the debutant lineup lists players who will return next year and some of them are players of no mean abilities.

For example at left end, Bob Bartlett, a promising sophomore who has not seen action this year, is a strong possibility. Albert Cahn, capain of last year's freshman team will probably be used at tackle. Jack DeBenedetti, a junior, is the other end and Nick Bican, a formidable person on any football field, should fit into Dolph Timmerman's shoes at left tackle. Price has not chosen his guards any more than he has selected the rest of his team, but it seems likely that John Watson and Carl Handy will hold the positions since Harry Gill, letterman who did not play Saturday, is still nursing a shoulder injury.

Frank Medanich may step into Capt. Roy Riegel's place at center. Like the others mentioned, Medanich has more varsity competiton ahead of him.

Strong Backfield

In the backfield Ed Kirwan, a youthful quarterback who gives promise of developing into a shrewd fie'd general in due time may take the reins from Lee Eisan before the game has ticked away.

Both halfbacks are seniors—Eldred Lane a small but tough little back and Lee Rice, who made a name for himself as a defensive back in the St. Mary's game and who saw rapid action against the Quakers. Rusty Gill, big and formidable even though he is a youngster, will probably be the Price choice at fullback if , as seems likely. Price chooses to start the men who faced Penn at the kickoff, the linup will look like this: Norton end Timmerman, tackle, and Pinto guard at the left side of the line; Capt. Roy Riegels, center; Ber. Schwartz, guard, Ted Beckett tackle and Russ Avery, end on the right. In the backfield Eisan, quarter, with Lom and Ed Griffiths at halves and Hickinbotham, fullback.

Scene May Change

However, before the clubmen return to Post street the scene may change to something like this:

Ed Kirwan, quarter; Eldred Lane and Lee Rice, halves, and Gill, fullback.

The Bears are scheduled to arrive in Berkeley some time beforenoon Wednesday, a breakdown at the Benicia ferries necessitating routing the special train through Stockton. No injuries were suffered by the Bears in the game. Garrity and Gill are both improving. Riegel's knee is touchy, but as well as could be expected.

Local Gridders Meet Concord Here Tomorrow

The Varsity gridders will tangle tomorrow night with the strong Mt. Diablo high school eleven of Concord in a contest to be played on the Richmond high school field.

The local players are anxious to make up for their losses of the firs. part of the season by a series of victories in their contests. Tomorrow night's battle therefore promises to be a torrid one, for the locals will put every ounce of energy oward the realization of this aim. They showed great improvement last Friday in the game with St. Mary's high school of Berkeley, and local fans are certain that Richmond is now on the upward road.

The next few weeks will be exceedingly busy ones for the Richmond aggregation. The local pigskin toters will meet their ancient rival, the San Rafael Military Academy next Tuesday on the other side of the bay. The game will begin at 2:30 o'clock. The two schools have been bitter rivals for many years, and a hard fought battle will probably be staged. The local team is favored to win because of the substantial numbe rof games won by Richmond against the San Rafael squad in former years. However they will be offered stiff opposition, for the Academy will be exceedingly anxious to cause the downfall of such an o'd rival as Richmond high school.

The Richmond gridders are scheduled to play first game outside of the Eastbay area Nov. 2, when they will meet the Lodi high school squad on the Lodi field. A large crowd of rooters from Richmond is expected to journey to the scene of the fray

OAKLAND BALL CLUB TO BE SOLD

OAKLAND, Oct. 23. —UP— Negotiations for purchase of the Oakland baseball club of the Pacific Coast league from J. Cal Ewing, veteran member of the circuit, and Ivan Howard were nearing completion late tonight the United Press learned.

Victor Devincenzi disc'osed that announcement of the outcome of the negotiations by which A. R. Miller, Carl Zamloch and himself hope to purchase the team would probably be made early Thursday.

Miller and Devincenzi were formerly associated with a large taxicab company but sold out their interests recently. Zamloch is coach of the University of California baseball nine and would become manager and vice-president of the Oaks, it was reported.

Devincenzi said reports that between $350,000 and $400,000 would be spent for the Oakland franchise were incorrect.

Ewing and Howard could not be located for statements. Sam Zamloch said only Ewing could give out a further statement about the proposed deal and Miller was traveling in the north.

TWO OFFENSIVE SYSTEMS TO CLASH

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 23.—Two of the greates. offensive systems in football will clash here Saturday afternoon when Howard Jones' Trojans and 'Pop" Warner's Cardinals meet in their annual game. Since the first day of practice in September these two arch-rivals have been pointed for each other. Each has taken preliminary opponents in strid eand each will enter the contest, practically at their full strength. An idea of the scoring power of Stanford and Southern California may be obtained from a glanc eat their early season records. The southerners have plied up 209 points in four games —an astounding average of 50 per contes. The Cards have made 181 in five starts—an average of 36 points.

All of which would probably be taken as a clear indication of a free scoring contest if the defensive records were not considered. Jones' team has had one touchdown scored upon it—by Oregon State. Warner's aggregation has had its goal line crossed twice—once by Oregon and once by Oregon State. Peculiarly enough, each of these three scores was made on a forward pass. Southern California's offense, featuring Saunders, Pinckert, Hill Moses ,Duffield, Musick Shaver and others depends on speed and power for the most part and well it may .Probably no greater group of backs was ever gathered together on one squad, if versatility counts for anything. Stanford's attack, presenting Smalling Fleishacker, Fentrup, Rothert Moffatt, Simpkins, Hillman and others relies on a slightly different combination - deception and power. Each team has speed backs, power backs, clever backs. Each has a staunch and experienced line. Each has great forward pass snagging ends. Each has plenty of reserve material. As a matter of fact both Southern California and Stanford will be represented by great football machines.

Dopesters who like to dal'y with comparative scores give up in disgust when trying to figure the outcome. The Trojans beat U. C. L. A by 76 points and the Cardinals won from the same team by 57 points—a 19 point edge for the southerners. The Trojans trimmed Oregon State by 14 points and the Redshirts handed the Orangemen a 33 point licking—a 19 point margin for the Cards. Judging by early season games, the rival coaches will start the following lineups Saturday:

RECRUITING OF GRID PLAYERS SCORED

intercollegiate football.

"In the midwest the intercollegiate conference, regarded by many as the most thoroughly controlled by all conference bodies has repeatedly called recruiting and subsidizing its most serious problem, and events in the spring of 1929 clearly demonstarted this fact.

"On the Pacific coast the largest institutions, having expanded much ineffectual effort to control the abuse are even now attempting to arrive at an equitable solution through common understanding.

Many Varieties

"The varities of recruiting are almost infinite," the bulletin continues. "They range from rare and casual contacts made or directed by an individual in the athletic organization of the institution—Chicago, University of Colorado, Cornell, Washington State College—in which the motive may ybe the general welfare of hte institution or personal favory to an intensely organized, sometimes subtle system that may utilize or coordinate numbers of agents on or off the campus—Michigan northwestern, Oglethorpe Southern California, Wisconsin."

"Although the extent and intensity of recruiting elude geographical classification, it may be observed that soliciting apart from subsidies, appears to be less strenuous in the southwest and, with one or two exceptions, in New England than it is in the ohter eastern and middle Atlantic states. In the Rocky Mountain conference, the practice although not yet general, is spreading. In the midwest and southand on the Pacific coast, soliciting and bidding for athletes is keen.

Canada Lauded

In addition,says the bul'etin, Canadian university sportsmanship is sufficiently strong to preevnt recruiting.

The bulletin tells about the prominent high school athlete who goes "shopping around" for his higher education, asking what the colleges have to offer besides information and a freshman cap.

"If all colleges which receive and answer athletes letters showed in their replies the high minded disapproval of these tenders he yexhibit in conversations and in speeches, before long the tone of such "feelers" from high school athletes would change. Evidence to this effect is found at those institutions—Bates Bowdoin, Brigham Young, Chicago Cornell, Lehigh, Stanford, Tulane and Virginia—where such phrases as follows set the tone of replies.

"The only inducement we offer to any student is that of a good education. This is all the right kind of athlete expects of us."

Bear Freshmen, Artillery Will Play Saturday

BERKELEY, Oct. 23—San Francisco sends its 250th Coast Artillery football team to Berkeley on Saturday to meet California's freshmen eleven in the preliminary to the Varsity-Olympic club small time classic. The soldiers, with a heavier eleven, are at the top of their game.

The blue and gold yearlings are rounding into shape after running up against two tough opponents in the first games of the season. Following losses to Santa Clara and St. Mary's, the Babes ecored wins over Fullerton and San Mateo Junior colleges. In so doing, they showed a greatly improved game of football, though the precision and certainty that characterizes a championship team is still lacking.

Next Saturday the freshmen play their toughest game of the season, that against Southern California freshmen in the Memorial stadium. Should the team perform well this Saturday against their heavier opponents, hope may be held that the Blue and Gold first year team is ready to meet the threat from the south. The U. S. C. team now has a toe hold on the freshman championship of the state by reason of its 13 to 0 victory over Stanford freshmen last Saturday.

U. C. Athletes Will Be Seen At Local School

An exhibition of boxing, wrestling, fencing, and gymnastics will be offered by well known amateurs from the University of California on Nov. 8 at the Longfellow Junior high school gymnasium.

The Pacific coast Inter-collegiate wrestling champion in the 158 and the 173 pound classes will participate in the exhibition. A coast middleweight champion boxer and a lightweight champion of the ring will also be included on the bill.

Dusty Miller Signed For Vallejo Go

VALLEJO Oct. 23.—Anytime "Dusty" Miller steps into the ring the boxing fans in this vicinity are assured of a real battle and with him fighting Joe Woods Los Angeles heavyweight here Thursday night over the ten round route, the fans are certain of seeing another fistic classic of the year.

This fight ranks just as high as the one between "Dusty" Miller and Bud Doyle which was viewed by more than 200 fans.

Woods is the holder of a record that can not be eclipsed by any other boxer on the Pacific coast. Only recently he won 14 straight fights via the knockout route, which included Frankie Campbell, Bud Doyle, Mike Arnold Harry Fay, Frank Carton, Tom Pivac Duke Horn and Cliff Ramles. He also has won decisions over Joe Lohman, Frank Williams and Les Kennedy.

To back up this main attraction the local promoter has secured a boxer who is the greatest prospect since the days of Tod Morgan. This boxer Andy Anderson, lightweight, who is meeting Freddie Montague in a four round semi-windup. A great set of preliminaries have been lined up to complete the card.

The coast fencing champion of the American Athletic Union will appear and the coast all around gym champion is also scheduled for the exhibition.

The program is under the direction of G. E. Hiatt, director of physical education at the Longfellow Junior high school.

A large crowd is expected to attend this unusual offering. An exhibition of the same sort met with great success last year, and much interest in these contests has been aroused in Richmond.

SYNOPSIS

In a quarrel involving his wife, Katherine, Joe Lane, ex-pugilist and radio singer, accidentally kills Arthur Phillips, his manager. Joe serves a year in prison for manslaughter. Unwilling to disgrace Katherine and their son, Little Pal, Joe forces his wife to seek a divorce by accusing her of intimacy with Dr. Merrill for whom she is a nurse. Upon his release Joe goes to see his boy in school. When he leaves, the child, devoted to his father, follows him and is run over. Katherine, notified of the boy's disappearance, tells Dr. Merrill, who believes that Joe has kidnapped Little Pal. In the doctor's office. . . .

"Very well." She opened an index file and removed a card. "Your name's Joe Lane, isn't it? And the address?"

"Is that necessary?" Joe demanded. He hadn't any address to give. Only the prison—and he didn't live there any more. Or the hospital—and he had been there only that long, long night waiting to take Little Pal out in the morning.

"It's customary," Miss Locke answered.

"Listen, lady," Joe insisted. "If you'll just tell the doctor that Joe Lane's here with his little boy that'll be all that's necessary. I've gotta see him quick."

"Well—" the nurse hesitated and then started towards the doctor's office. "I'll tell him, Mr. Lane." She disappeared into the inner room.

The doctor doubted his story.

"Yes?" Dr. Merrill, the telephone receiver in his hand, looked up quickly as the girl entered. "Hello," he called into the telephone. "Just a moment." He turned to the nurse, holding his palm over the mouthpiece. He could hear the voice on the other end repeating: "Police Headquarters!"

"There's a Mr. Lane to see you, doctor," Miss Locke began.

"All right! All right! Wrong number!" Dr. Merrill shouted into the mouthpiece and clicked the receiver back onto the hook. "Joe Lane's out there?" he demanded anxiously. "Is there anyone with him?"

"Yes, doctor. He has his little boy with him."

Dr. Merrill jumped to his feet pacing the room excitedly. So Joe had taken the child after all. And now he was bringing him back to Katherine. That was a fool's stunt! Run off with the child and cause the mother all the worry and pain Joe should be punished.

"See here, Miss Locke, show that man in right away," he commanded brusquely.

"Yes, doctor." The nurse turned hastily and started for the waiting room. She had never seen the usually cool and unperturbed Dr. Merrill so upset before. "And—wait a minute!"

Miss Locke stopped, her hand on the doorknob.

"Don't let anyone else in here until I tell you to," the doctor continued. "And another thing! You stay right by the telephone outside. I've got to do some very important work. When I press this buzzer," he indicated the button at the side of his big desk, "you telephone for the police to come immediately! You understand everything?"

"Yes, doctor!" Miss Locke nodded, her eyes wide with astonishment. "I'll stay right by the 'phone!" She scurried from the room.

"The doctor will see you right away," she announced, beckoning to Joe. "Will you go in, please?" She left the door open and hurried to her desk, seizing the telephone, waiting for the signal.

CHAPTER XVII

As Joe rose from his chair at the nurse's summons, settling the child more firmly in his arms, Little Pal's cap dropped to the floor. Neither the song plugger nor Miss Locke noticed the incident, so absorbed were they each in their own interests. Joe walked shakily across the room to the office, followed by the nurse's wary eyes.

Dr. Merrill stood beside his desk. He had never before seen Joe, but he felt that he would have recognized him because of the doctor's likeness to his father, and Junior's little features he knew very well indeed. As he looked from Joe to the child he stepped closer, frowning.

"Why, what's the matter with him?" he exclaimed. The heavy, spasmodic breathing, the white countenance, the sudden twitching of the full lips told the physician a story.

"He was hurt in a street accident," Joe began to explain, his voice low and faltering. "I had him at the City Hospital, and they told me I had to get him to a specialist right away."

"Hello, Junior." Dr. Merrill picked up the child's outstretched hand, patting it. "Don't you remember me?"

"He's got a kind of paralysis," Joe explained hastily. "He can't talk. An' he can't walk, either."

"Oh, that's terrible!" The doctor seemed slightly dazed by the information. "I'm sorry, Junior," he said finally, smoothing back the child's hair with tender fingers.

"They told me at the hospital," Joe went on quickly, "that you might be able to help me. They said he'd have to have a great specialist — like — like you. Someone who could work miracles."

"Just what happened?" the doctor questioned. His mind was far from push buttons and the police for the moment. He was only a surgeon beginning work on a case. But Joe's next words reminded him of the personal side of the matter.

"I don't know, exactly," Joe told him. "I only know that the kid got run over by a truck. You see, I went out to the school to see him. Well, I left the school, and then as I was going down the street I heard some people calling out that there'd been a child hurt, an' I went back an' there was the kid. So we got him to the hospital in an ambulance, an' at the hospital they told me I better bring him to you."

A very likely story, the doctor thought. "Well, I'd better have a look at him right away," he suggested, reaching out his arms to take the child.

Joe drew the boy closer to him. "I'd rather carry him myself, if you don't mind," he said sharply. "He's used to me."

Dr. Merrill nodded. "Just bring Junior over here," he directed, leading the way to a long, white, iron table.

Gently the song plugger lowered Junior onto the table, face downward, easing the little head into a resting position as the doctor indicated.

"I won't hurt you, Junior," Dr. Merrill told the child.

With deft fingers he began to remove the baby's blouse, exposing the back. Skillfully he went up and down the spine, pressing here, rubbing there. Beside him stood Joe watching each move anxiously. Little Pal must be cured. Surely this specialist could work the cure. He'd do it for Katherine's sake, if for no other reason, Joe thought bitterly.

Outside in the waiting room the nurse still stood at the telephone, her tense fingers gripping the receiver. But as yet no buzzing sound warned her. So absorbed was she in her vigil that when the outer door swung open she jumped, and tried to stifle an exclamation of surprise. Then she smiled.

"Why, hello, Katherine," she greeted the new comer.

"Hello, Tess. Is the doctor busy?"

"Yes, terribly busy," Miss Locke told her. "I can't go in until he rings."

"Do you think he'll be long?" Katherine felt that she must see Robert, must have some assurance before she went on to the hospital. The suspense was growing too terrible to bear and she needed the firm sympathy of someone stronger than herself—someone in whom she placed her trust.

"I don't think he'll be much longer," Miss Locke replied, thinking of the buzzer that might ring at any moment, now.

"Well, I'll wait for him, then." Katherine sat down on the chair so recently occupied by Joe. She stared around the office and tried to interest herself in the details of the pictures on the wall. Suddenly she stopped and picked up the object that lay beside the chair, turning it idly about in her hands. It was a boy's cap. It looked almost like Junior's. For one brief moment she was certain it was Junior's. But no, it couldn't be. She placed the hat on the desk and forgot about it in thinking of her present problem.

Dr. Merrill was still bending over Junior, busy with his preliminary examination. Now and again he frowned as though he were puzzled. Finally he turned to Joe.

ATLANTIC FLIER MAY STOP AT GREENLAND

fly to London, had fuel for 25 hours. By noon today the 25 hours were up and there was no word from the 31-year old aviator.

Croydon airdrome near London was lighted up to receive him, but no hope was held here he would reach there.

Coast Watched

Watch was kept along the coasts of Ireland, England and even of France and the Azores. Ships had been asked to remain alert for signs of the flier.

But as hour after hour passed beyond the time he himself estimated for exhaustion of his fuel supply, the word flashed back "no news of Diteman," and hope dwindled.

Only three persons still believed he had a chance of success. They were his wife in Billings, Mont., and his aged parents in Portland, Ore.

Odds Overwhelming

The odds against Diteman were overwhelming. His plane was small, could not carry enough gas to insure a broad safety factor, and had an open cockpit where the cattleman would receive little protection against the rain and wind.

There was danger of ice forming on the wings and dragging him down into the sea. The monoplane was not equipped with floating pontoons. Diteman had no rubber boat. He had no radio.

Much of his flight lay off the steamer lanes, and if he descended on the ocean he had little chance of being picked up. There was a possibility that he landed in some remote section of Ireland or in the British Isles.

Harrowing Passage

Diteman must have encountered a harrowing passage as far as he flew. A stiff, cold wind battered into the face of his plane throughout the first half of the journey. If he succeeded in approaching the Irish coast he ran into squally winds, slightly relpful, but accompanied by rain and mists. The visibility was so poor that he could not have seen many feet ahead.

Disregarding the fact that 27 persons had met death trying to defeat the Atlantic by air, the cattleman, with only 100 hours flying experience behind him, set out in his low-wing plane "The Golden Hind," to do what only Charles A. Lindbergh had ever been able to do—fly across the ocean alone.

Motive Unknown

So hopeless did his attempt seem, on second thought, that speculation was rife in Newfoundland as to just what impelled Diteman. Heyman Archibald, his confidant at Harbor Grace, to whom he handed a letter disclosing his destination as London just before he took off, confessed ignorance of Diteman's motive. He denied point blank, however, that Diteman had been drinking.

There was a possibility—a bare possibility—that Diteman, seeing he could not succeed, made for some tramp steamer and landed in the water on the chance of being picked up. But if his life were saved in this manner it must have been by a ship unequipped with wireless—for both the U. S. Naval air station at Bar Harbor, Me., and the British Admiralty radio were in touch all day with practically every port and Atlantic steamer carrying radio, and the answer always came back, "no news of Diteman."

New Traffic Manager For Parr Company

A. A. Moran, for many years identified with Pacific Coast Shippers, has been named traffic manager for the Parr Richmond Terminal company, according to an announcement made yesterday by Fred Parr, president of the terminal company.

"Steamships will call where there is cargo and it will be my business to develop cargo in such volume that the leading steamship lines will make Richmond a regular port of call," Moran stated yesterday.

Moran started in 1904 with Swayne and Hoyt, steamship operators, and served 12 years as manager for their shipping business. He then went into business for himself under the firm name of Fair and Moran and handled a coastwise shipping business.

He joined the Dollar line in 1918, served as freight and traffic manager and continued in that capacity until 1926, when he retired because of illness. In 1928 he was employed by Sudden and Christenson as traffic manager of the Oriental agencies of the State Steamship company of Portland and the Tacoma Oriental Steamship line of Tacoma.

Moran comes to the Parr organization with a wide acquaintance with shippers, steamship lines and general shipping conditions on the Pacific coast.

"My first work here will be to increase the volume of cargo," Moran said. "I am fully sold on the possibilities of Richmond. The opportunities for extensive industrial development adjacent to the harbor here are greater than on any part of San Francisco bay.

"San Francisco is reaching the saturation facilities and industrial expansion sites. Oakland is nearing the same situation but in Richmond there is opportunity that is not equalled elsewhere.

"The Nelson line now makes Richmond a regular port of call and as more cargo is developed this business will increase and other lines will call here.

"It is a matter of developing cargo, and the ships will come."

MONTGOMERY WARD STORE HAS 1879 PAPERS TELLING OF EDISON LIGHT INVENTION

With the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the invention of electric lights by Thomas A. Edison, world famous inventor, the Montgomery Ward department store at Ninth street and Macdonald avenue have interesting mementos for the occasion.

Authentic copies of the New York Herald for Sunday, Dec. 21, 1879 are at the store and may be had for the asking. There are a limited number, however, and Richmondites who wish a copy of the paper should get them immediately, officials of the local store announced yesterday.

The copies are not only interesting from the standpoint of the light celebration, but they are also interesting examples of early journalism.

The front page of the paper is devoted to news, classified advertisements and display ads.

The second page contains a full account of the invention of the light and tells that the first public exhibition of this new marvel will be shown New Year's eve at Menlo park.

The article is headed "Edison's Light. The great Inventor's triumph in Electric Illumination. A Scrap of Paper. It Makes a Light, Without Gas or Flame, Cheaper Than Oil. Transformed in the Furnace. Complete Details of the Perfected Carbon Lamp. Fifteen Months of Toil. Story of His Tireless Experiments with Lamps, Burners and Generators. Success in a Cotton Thread. The Wizard's Byplay, with Bodily Pain and Gold "Tailings." History of Electric Lighting."

One paragraph of the article says, "Edison's light, incredible as it may appear, is produced from a little piece of paper—a tiny strip of paper that a breath would blow away. Through this little strip of paper is passed an electric current, and the result is a bright, beautiful light like the mellow sunset of an Italian autumn."

The article is illustrated with diagrams and graphs.

The third page is not a reprint of the Herald, but is made up of pictures which appeared in various newspapers and magazines. The pictures are woodcuts and are perfectly reproduced.

The fourth and last page is devoted to the development of electric lights and many interesting and amusing articles are quoted. Several declare that the light will never be a success and that Edison approached the proposition from the wrong angle.

Protect Your Furniture

A $1.25 to Rid Your Home of Moths May Save You Hundreds of Dollars.

MORTEMOTH KILLS MOTHS

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furniture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deeply as possible, behind the cushions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again.

FALL BRIBERY CASE NEARS JURY

throughout the trial.

Gift Denounced

Government Prosecutor Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia closed the case as far as the lawyers are concerned today with a caustic speech denouncing the $100,000 "loan" or "gift" by E. L. Doheny, the oil man, to Fall as a corrupt transaction, designed to influence Falls action on Doheny's oil lease applications.

Harry F. Sinclair, who like Doheny got leases from Fall in 1922, also gave Fall "rolls of cash that would choke a mule," in addition to $235,000 in non-traceable Liberty bonds.

Fall and Doheny, when the $100,000 transaction occured on Nov. 30, 1921, "wanted no records kept," Roberts said.

'Reason For Cash'

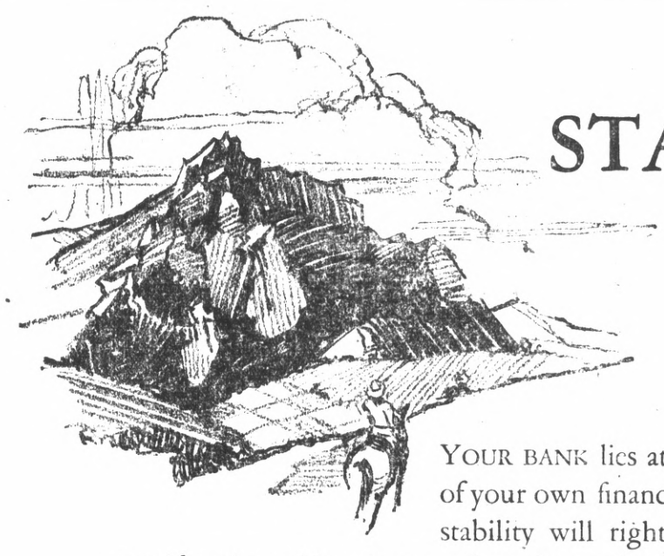

"That's why the money was sent to Fall by cash, instead of by check, and the money was taken, not from Doheny's bank account but from that of his son," the prosecutor said.

"It is immaterial whether the transaction was a loan or a gift. The important thing was the influence it had; the friendship between the two men just makes it worse."

It was Fall's "guilty conscience," Roberts said, which caused the former secretary to write a letter to the senate oil investigating committee in 1923, asserting that the $100,000 came from E. B. McLean, Washington publisher and sportsman.

Taking up the defense claim that navy officials, alarmed at reports that Japan was arming for a war, convinced Doheny that he should bid for the lease and its accompanying oil tank construction as a patriotic duty, Roberts shouted.
